Chapter 1 by Michael Serrano

The Town of Trobhan was once a civil town, most everyone was jolly and had a very unique talent compared to those in the universe of salvaic. You see everyone was part animal there and there was no inequality, until the grateful day that minyakes decided to invade, the great king adrle or in human tongue maynor had finally decided to prepare his army. in that army was a human boy named parker, this boy parker was no ordinary boy at all he was at one point the creator of the realms and worlds, in order to make sure that he did not destroy the all that is know, the Queens and Kings of the realm had decided to trick him by making him fall in love with a witch named monqua and kill him with a poison weapon. Monqua however fell madly in love with him and decided to spare him. When the kings and Queens found out about this they vanquished monqua to the forgotten realms and never heard of again, at least not till day of the grand prophecy

~When lives change and stories die, the realms of the forgotten and the realms of the known align themselves with what was told, every monster in every realm has finally decided to come again and only the one's who could control the worlds must once again decide to fold and that is when our story begins in a dark town of Trobhan. ~
